BEFORE THE DISCIPLINARY BOARD OF THE
WASHINGTON STATE BAR ASSOCIATION

In Re:)
JAMES D. PIRTLE,) PUBLIC NO. 13 #00115
Respondent Lawyer WSBA No. 37422) CORRECTED ) FINDINGS OF FACT, CONCLUSIONS OF ) LAW AND HEARING OFFICER'S ) RECOMMENDATION

In accordance with Rule 10.13 of the Rules for Enforcement of Lawyer Conduct (ELC), a hearing was held before the undersigned Hearing Officer on May 18 and 19, 2015 with additional evidence received on June 8, 2015. Disciplinary counsel Randy Beitel appeared for the Association and the Respondent, James Pirtle appeared through his counsels of record, M. Varn Chandola and Joseph A. Evans.

The Respondent was charged by Formal Complaint dated July 2, 2014 with five counts of violation of the rules of professional conduct. On April 24, 2015 the Association filed a Corrected Formal Complaint. It charged Respondent with violation of the rules of professional conduct as follows:

COUNT 1- By converting client funds to his own use, Respondent violated RPC 1.15A(b) and/or RPC 8.4(c) and/ or RPC 8.4(b) by violating RCW 9A.56.030(first degree theft).

COUNT 2- by failing to maintain a check register for his IOLTA trust account on a current basis that included all transactions in the account, Respondent violated RPC 1.15A(h)(2) by

1 violating RPC 1.15B(a)(1).

2 COUNT 3- by failing to maintain individual client ledgers for his IOLTA trust account on a
3 current basis Respondent violated RPC 1.15A(h)(2) by violating RPC 1.15 B(a)(2).

4 COUNT 4- by failing to reconcile his check register balance for his IOLTA trust account to 5 the bank statement balance and/or reconcile the check register balance to the combined total of 6 all client ledger records, Respondent violated RPC 1.15A(h)(6).

7 COUNT 5- by dispersing more funds on behalf of clients than the individual clients had 8 on deposit in his IOLTA trust account, Respondent violated RPC 1.15A(h)(8).

9 Based upon the pleadings in the case, the testimony and exhibits at the hearing, the 10 Hearing Officer makes the following facts were established by a clear preponderance of the 11 evidence:

12 I. FINDINGS OF FACT

13 In his Answer to Formal Complaint (date unknown), the Respondent admitted the following:

14 1. During the period from October 1, 2011 through March 31, 2013, the Respondent
15 maintained the IOLTA trust account ending in 1884 at Key Bank for the deposit of client funds.

16 2. On or about January 30, 2013, the Respondent dispersed check number 1124
17 from his IOLTA trust account in the amount of $7,500 payable to his operating account. He then 18 endorsed and deposited that check into his operating account on approximately that same date.

19 3. This disbursement to the Respondent's operating account was not related to the 20 interest of any client whose funds Respondent was holding in his IOLTA account. Respondent 21 wrongfully and without authorization or entitlement and with the intent to deprive the owners of 22 the $7,500 of their funds, remove the funds from his IOLTA account.

23 4. The Respondent used the $7,500 he deposited into his operating account to pay 24 business and/or personal expenses unrelated to the client whose funds he had taken.

25 5. On or about March 21, 2013, Respondent deposited $7,500 of his own funds to

1 his IOLTA Trust account. The Respondent made this deposit with intent to restore the funds he 2 had removed from his IOLTA trust account on or about January 30, 2013.

3 6. By converting client funds to his own use, the Respondent violated RPC 1.15A(b)
4 and/ or RPC 8.4(c) and/ or RPC 8.4(b) by violating RCW 9.A.56.030 (first degree theft).

5 7. During the period from January 30, 2012 through March 26, 2012, the 6 Respondent failed to maintain a check register that included all transactions for IOLTA trust
7 account ending in 1884 at Key Bank.

8 8. During the period from January 30, 2012 through March 26, 2012, the 9 Respondent failed to maintain a check register with the running balance on a current basis for 10 IOLTA trust account ending in 1884 at Key Bank.

11 9. During the period from January 30, 2012 through March 26, 2012, the 12 Respondent failed to maintain individual client ledgers on a current basis as described in RPC
13 1.15B (a) (2) for each client with funds in his IOLTA trust account ending in 1884 at Key Bank.

14 10. During the period from January 30, 2012 through March 26, 2012, the 15 Respondent failed to prepare reconciliations from the bank statement to the check register for 16 his IOLTA trust account ending in 1884 at Key Bank. During that period he also failed to prepare 17 reconciliations from the check register to the combined total of his client ledgers for his IOLTA
18 Trust account ending in 1884 at Key Bank.

19 11. On one or more occasions during the period from January 30, 2012 through 20 March 26, 2012 the Respondent dispersed more funds on behalf of clients than the clients had 21 on deposit in his IOLTA trust account ending in 1884 at Key Bank.

22 12. By failing to maintain a check register for his IOLTA trust account on a current 23 basis that included all transactions in the account, Respondent violated RPC 1.1 5A (h) (2) by 24 violating RPC 1.15B(a)(1).

25 13. By failing to maintain individual client ledgers for his IOLTA trust account on a

1 current basis, Respondent violated RPC 1.15A(h)(2) by violating RPC 1.15B(a)(2).

2 14. By failing to reconcile his check register balance for his IOLTA trust account to the 3 bank statement balance and/or reconcile the check register balance to the combined total of all 4 client ledger records, Respondent violated RPC 1.15A(h)(6).

5 15. By disbursing more funds on behalf of clients than the individual clients had on 6 deposit in his IOLTA trust account, the Respondent violated RPC 1.15A(h)(8).

7 16. The Respondent began practicing law in the State of Washington on May 24, 8 2006.

9 17. In the hearing on this matter on May 18, 2015, the Respondent confirmed his 10 admission of the above allegations. In addition to the allegations admitted by the Respondent, 11 additional facts were established through the witness testimony and exhibits presented at the 12 hearing.

13 18. Respondent Pirtle initially started his own practice under the name of Law Office 14 of James D. Pirtle. In approximately March of 2010, he took on a partner, Matthew Hale, and 15 together they formed Sentinel Law Group. That partnership practiced under the name Sentinel
16 Law Group as well as under the name Northwest Law Group, PLLC.

17 19. Initially, Mr. Pirtle handled personal injury and criminal defense matters. Starting 18 in 2011, while still in a partnership with Mr. Hale, he began doing international human rights work 19 in Africa.

20 20. On approximately April 11, 2011, an overdraft notice was issued to the Sentinel
21 Law Group by Wells Fargo Bank, where Sentinel Law Group maintained a pooled IOLTA trust
22 account. As Respondent Pirtle's name was on the trust account, WSBA sent the Respondent a 23 letter requesting an explanation for the overdraft to be accompanied by certain documentation.

24 21. The Respondent responded and on April 26, 2011, after receiving requested
25 bank/ accounting records from the Respondent, WSBA sent Respondent Pirtle a detailed letter

1 advising that his practices appeared to violate RPC 1.15A(h)(7) and RPC 1.15(A)(h)(8) as he did
2 not permit checks deposited to clear before making disbursements from those funds.
3 Additionally, he was advised that his recordkeeping practices did not comply with the 4 requirements of RPC 1.15(B)(a)(2). Specifically, his "disbursal sheets" or "trust accountings" did 5 not include the date on which funds were received or disbursed, did not include a new client fund 6 balance after each transaction, and the statements appeared to be prepared at the time of 7 disbursal rather than contemporaneously. He was advised that those practices violated at 8 minimum, RPC 1.15A(h)(7) and (8), and RPC 1.15B(a).

9 22. The letter described specific problems with the record keeping practice and 10 included the publication "Managing Client Trust Accounts: Rules, Regulations, and Common 11 Sense." Although WSBA dismissed the matter, WSBA articulated the expectation and 12 recommendation that the Respondent reconstruct his trust account records to bring both his 13 records and handling of client funds into compliance with the RPC to avoid future disciplinary 14 action.

15 23. Respondent Pirtle and Mr. Hale dissolved their partnership on approximately 16 January 1, 2012. Although Mr. Hale was no longer a participant in The Sentinel Law Group 17 which continued to operate as of the time of this hearing, they continued to share some financial 18 interests on a number of cases. However, the Respondent had sole control of the Wells Fargo 19 trust account associated with The Sentinel Law Group.

20 24. Shortly after Mr. Hale departure, the Respondent took on a new partner, Alex 21 Ferguson. The new partnership continued to use Key Bank IOLTA account #1884 associated 22 with Northwest Law Group, however, the Respondent and Mr. Ferguson began practicing under 23 the name of Pirtle Ferguson. After Mr. Hale's departure, the Respondent was the sole person in 24 charge of both the Key Bank trust account #1884 and the Wells Fargo trust account under the 25 name of The Sentinel Law Group which was devoted to the Respondent's human rights work.

1 Mr. Ferguson never had involvement with the trust accounts. The partnership with Mr. Ferguson
2 dissolved on July 1, 2013.

3 25. The Respondent received and read the publication "Managing Client Trust 4 Accounts" sent to him by WSBA on April 26, 2011. However, the respondent did not believe he 5 had an obligation to comply with RPC 1.15B in regards to personal injury matters.

6 26. After January 1, 2012, his partner Alex Ferguson handled personal injury matters
7 for the firm and the Respondent focused exclusively on international human rights work. As the 8 human rights work performed was exclusively pro bono, the only income received by the firm
9 was through the personal injury work performed by Mr. Ferguson.

10 27. Beginning in 2011 when the Respondent became involved in his pro bono human 11 rights work, he began losing revenue. He was devoting considerable time to his pro bono work 12 and he was not getting referrals for paying clients. In addition to the drop in income, he used 13 financial resources to travel to Africa twice and on one occasion, in February or March of 2013, 14 he assisted his partner and co-counsel in Uganda, Francis Onyango, to travel to America.

15 NOTICE OF NON SUFFICIENT FUNDS AND INVESTIGATION BY WSBA

16 28. On April 4, 2012, Key Bank sent the Washington State Bar Association notice of 17 non-sufficient funds in the IOLTA account for Pirtle Ferguson, PLLC account #1884.

18 29. On April 19, 2012, WSBA's audit manager sent a letter to the Respondent 19 advising that a grievance file was opened against him and additionally requesting a full 20 explanation of the cause of the overdraft and how the overdraft was corrected. The auditor 21 requested:

- 22 1) bank statements for the month in which the overdraft occurred,
- 23 2) deposit slips, canceled checks, deposit items and checks that were returned by the bank, and/or other withdrawals for the month in which the overdraft occurred;
- 24 3) check register for the month in which the overdraft occurred;
- 25 4) ledgers for any client matter on which there was activity or a balance during the month in which the overdraft occurred;
- 5) his reconciliation between the bank statements and the check register for the month in which the overdraft occurred and the preceding month;

- 1 6) his reconciliation between the check register and the client ledgers for the month
2 in which the overdraft occurred and the preceding month; and
3 7) record supporting his explanation of how the overdraft was corrected.

30. On April 23, 2012, the Respondent provided

- 4 1) a two-page Internet printout of account transactions for the IOLTA account in 5 question,
6 2) a copy of his IOLTA checkbook registry for the period from January 30, 2012
7 through March 27, 2012,
8 3) eight (8) trust accounting ledgers for clients for the months of October 2011, and 9 January, February and March 2012 with copies of checks associated with the 10 ledgers.

31. On April 24, 2012, the Respondent provided a letter from Key Bank explaining 11 that no checks were returned and that all checks were honored and all overdraft fees refunded.

32. On May 4, 2012, the WSBA auditor wrote to the Respondent and indicated that 12 not all requested records were provided. In particular, they requested:

- 13 1) an explanation of how the overdraft occurred as the Key Bank letter stating no 14 checks were returned was insufficient;
15 2) bank statement for the month in which the overdraft occurred as the account
16 transaction printout was insufficient;
17 3) ledgers for any client matter on which there was activity or a balance during the 18 month in which the overdraft occurred as he provided a document called "trust 19 accounting" but not client ledgers;
20 4) his reconciliation between the bank statements and the check register for the 21 month in which the overdraft occurred and the preceding month;
22 5) his reconciliation between the check register and the client ledgers for the month
23 in which the overdraft occurred and the preceding month; and 24 6) record supporting his explanation of how the overdraft was corrected.

25 The auditor provided the Respondent a copy of the WSBA publication "Managing Client Trust Accounts."

33. On May 7, 2012, the Respondent replied and advised the WSBA auditor that the "Trust Account" ledgers he provided complied with RPC 1.15(a)(2) [sic]. Additionally, he provided the April 2012 bank statement which showed an ending balance of $620.46, an email between he and Key Bank indicating Key's Bank's intent to provide a writing verifying there was a system error which resulted in the April 3, 2012 overdraft notice.

1 34. On May 17, 2012, the Respondent verified in a telephone call that he had no
2 client ledgers (other than the documents provided), and that he did not have client ledger
3 reconciliations or bank reconciliations.

4 35. On May 18, 2012, the Respondent indicated he did not know who the $620.76
5 held in the IOLTA account belonged to. He speculated it was an amount disputed with another
6 lawyer although he could not recall on what case. He promised to research the issue and get 7 back to the auditor prior to a schedule trip out of town on May 25, 2012.

8 36. On May 24, 2012, the Respondent sent the WSBA auditor a letter. He indicated
9 he was mistaken about the ownership of the $620.76 held in trust. He indicated his firm held 10 $38.78 of their funds in the account for administrative costs. Additionally, he described a series 11 of errors or irregularities including

- 12 1. A check was written in the amount of $1000.00 to CDI, a client's provider, on 13 November 2, 2011 which had never cleared;
- 14 2. Overpayments of $8.41 and $308.50 to clients and/ or providers on February 15, 15 2012 and approximately February 22, 2012 respectively,
- 16 3. A check of $141.84 to L& I for a client but where the client held no funds in trust.

17 37. The Respondent apologized for the errors. He proposed to move $379.54 from 18 his operating account to the business account and resubmit a payment of $1,000.00 to CDI to 19 satisfy the balance owed to them. He indicated an intent to consult with his accountant in order
20 to strictly adhere to WSBA trust record requirements, and to have him/ her review all trust 21 deposits and disbursements to prevent future accounting errors.

22 38. On April 4, 2012, had CDI attempted to negotiate the check written to them six 23 months earlier on November 2, 2011, there would have been insufficient funds.

24 39. In May 2012, WSBA issued a Subpoena to Key Bank and received production in 25 June 2012.

 40. On February 27, 2013, the WSBA auditor spoke with Respondent Pirtle by telephone and indicated she would be sending him a request for 3 months of records and on

1 February 28, 2013, the letter was sent requesting records for November and December 2012,
2 plus January 2013 by March 18, 2013.

3 41. The Respondent did not provide the records by the requested date. After 4 receiving the request, he consulted with his professional responsibility professor at Seattle
5 University who recommend that he secure an extension in order to make sure that the trust
6 account was healthy before reporting his transgression. Subsequently, he left a voice message
7 for the WSBA auditor requesting an extension.

8 42. On March 27, 2013, WSBA auditor spoke to the Respondent telephonically and 9 asked why he needed an extension to provide bank records for the period from November 2012
10 through January 2013. Respondent indicated he wanted to provide records through March of 11 2013. The auditor indicated she did not request that timeframe and again asked that he provide 12 the requested records. The Respondent then stated that he was running short on funds to pay 13 operating expenses so he "borrowed" money from the trust account in January. He wanted to 14 provide the records through March so that he could show that the funds were paid back. He 15 wanted to try to get the records to the WSBA auditor by April 10, 2013.

16 43. On March 28, 2013, the Respondent provided records. In his accompanying letter
17 to WSBA auditor, he stated "I transgressed on January 30th of this year and loaned the firm 18 $7,500.00 before paying subrogation on one of the cases." He pointed out that the records being 19 provided substantiated that he replaced the funds and that all providers were paid.

20 44. The records showed that a deposit of $7,500.00 was made to the IOLTA trust 21 account on March 21, 2013.

22 45. On April 24, 2013, the Respondent spoke on the telephone with Marsha
23 Matsumoto of Office of Disciplinary Counsel. He indicated that he did not yet have an accountant 24 handling his trust account records and that his accountant only handled his taxes. In response
25 to a question regarding the maintenance of ledgers, he stated that he maintains "Client Ledger"

1 documents as shown in the material produced for client D.A. as he learned that his "Trust
2 Accounting" documents were not compliant. However, he stated he did not maintain one for D.D.
3 although he received funds for her. He explained that with a PI practice, money comes in and 4 quickly goes out. He indicated that he creates the "Client Ledger" around the time the funds are 5 paid out. The Respondent also indicated that approximately 6 months prior, he began 6 maintaining his bank reconciliations on the back of the bank statements.

7 46. On April 24, 2013, in response to further questions by ODC, the Respondent
8 explained that the $7,500.00 removed from the IOLTA account by him belonged to M.B. He was 9 aware that the funds were available in the account as a check to Puget Parks Chiropractor had 10 been written for $8,073.10 but not yet sent. He indicated that he replaced the $7,500.00 with his 11 personal money and that Puget Parks Chiropractic had now been paid. When asked what he 12 did with the $7,500.00, he stated that he used it to keep the firm "afloat". He said it was a 13 "desperate and stupid thing to do."

14 47. On April 24, 2013, ODC requested a copy of trust documents for M.B. and the 15 Respondent provided them on that same day. Although the "Client Ledger" dated October 15, 16 2012 itemized the checks paid, including the check number, the date of check, the amount of 17 check, and the payee with purpose of payment, it did not indicate on what dates deposits were 18 received into the trust account nor the amounts of each deposit. It also did not contain the new 19 client fund balance after each receipt, disbursement or transfer.

20 48. The Respondent's prior partner, Alex Ferguson, testified that he typically dealt 21 with the client relations, as well as communications and negotiations with adjusters. The 22 Respondent handled the financial side, including working with the bank information. Upon 23 conclusion of a case, a Settlement Disbursal Sheet was ordinarily prepared detailing the 24 disposition of all funds received in the case. This disbursal sheet as well as the final letter to the 25 client was prepared from a boiler plate form, could have been prepared by either he or the

1 Respondent, and bore his electronic signature. He did not recall in this case whether he 2 personally prepared the disbursal sheet and final letter to client dated October 8, 2012. However,
3 he indicated that he would have been the person to review the content with the client prior to 4 requesting their approval on final documents settling the case. He would have discussed with 5 Ms. B. the sum of $8,073.10 detailed on the Settlement Disbursal Sheet to be paid for medical 6 charges.

7 49. Mr. Ferguson could not state whether he or the Respondent prepared a letter
8 dated October 15, 2012 to Puget Park Chiropractic Clinic providing a check for $8,073.10, but he 9 indicated that the Respondent would have prepared the check. He was not aware of any 10 negotiations with Puget Park Chiropractic Clinic regarding the amount of their bill. He had no 11 discussions with Ms. B. regarding delaying payment to Puget Park and he was not aware of any 12 delays in paying their bill. Although he testified it was routine to try to negotiate fees with medical 13 providers, he had no recollection of any efforts to negotiate down the medical fees in Ms. B.'s 14 case.

15 50. Other than writing the check and eventually mailing it, the Respondent had no
16 communications with Puget Park Chiropractic Clinic. He at no time had any communications 17 with Ms. B. and he never disclosed to Mr. Ferguson that he had delayed in sending payment of 18 $8,073.10 to Puget Park Chiropractic Clinic.

19 51. Respondent was candid during his May 18, 2015 testimony that he does not 20 prepare monthly reconciliations. For his personal injury matters, the Respondent maintained the 21 print outs provided by the bank for the IOLTA account, a check register for the IOLTA account.
22 At the conclusion of a case, the Respondent prepared a Settlement Disbursal Sheet and a 23 "Client Ledger." He acknowledged that in Ms. B.'s case, $4,700.00 in funds were first received 24 and deposited to IOLTA trust on September 17, 2012. A check in the amount of $1,566.67 was 25 written on September 24, 2012 for legal fees in her case and on October 9, 2012, additional

1 funds of $11,000.00 were deposited to IOLTA trust for Ms. B. Although additional checks were 2 written on October 12, 2012 and October 15, 2012, he was steadfast in his position that 3 contemporaneous client ledgers were not required which either maintained a running balance
4 after deposits and/ or disbursements and that reconciliation with other bank records was not required.

5 52. The Respondent was adamant in his testimony that contingency cases such as 6 the personal injury matters handled by his law firm do not have the same record keeping 7 requirements as work performed in other areas of law.

8 53. The Respondent told Witness Nunes, his girlfriend with whom he cohabitated
9 from Fall of 2012 until approximately May 2013, that he had removed funds from his IOLTA
10 account for his own use as he was having financial difficulties. She did not know when this 11 occurred.

12 FACTS PERTAINING TO RESPONDENT'S EMOTIONAL/PSYCHOLOGICAL FUNCTIONING

13 54. The Respondent sought mental health treatment through the Veteran's 14 Administration where he had an initial assessment on April 15, 2013. Previously, he and his 15 girlfriend, Witness Nunes, had begun cohabitating in Fall of 2012. She saw him transition from 16 an outgoing person, to being reclusive, down, worried, irritable, sleeping long hours, drinking 17 more than she believed was healthy, and showing little desire to socialize. She believed he was 18 responding to financial stressors and she urged him to seek counseling to address what she 19 believed to be signs of depression as well as alcohol misuse.

20 55. At his initial assessment, the Respondent reported experiencing depression and 21 anxiety for the prior couple years. He had been prescribed Citalopram, an antidepressant, the 22 prior week by his referring doctor.

23 56. He began treatment with Dr. Greenberg on April 23, 2013 and saw her a total of 7
24 times between April 23, 2013 and July 19, 2013, then again once on October 24, 2013. At his 25 initial session, he described apathy malaise, lack of motivation, and feeling overwhelmed by his

1 professional responsibilities and financial struggles. Generally, he slept too much and had 2 difficulty getting up in the morning. He described drinking too much intermittently, such that he 3 was making an effort to cut back. He had previously seen a therapist a few times but did not find 4 it helpful so had not continued.

5 57. During the course of treatment, he described his existential crisis. Since 6 beginning his human rights work two years prior, he no longer found personal injury work
7 meaningful. He wished to continue doing this work but he had not received remuneration and did
8 not see any way to make human rights work lucrative. As of April 29, 2013, he had stopped
9 taking the antidepressant prescribed as he did not notice a difference. He continued to show low
10 mood, lethargy, and irritability. During his treatment, he discussed his past and current 11 relationships with women, his role as a caretaker in relationships, and his sense of lethargy and 12 feeling depleted from giving so much and not getting anything in return.

13 58. On July 19, 2013 visit, the Respondent reported feeling ready to finish working on 14 depression. He had a potential human rights teaching position in Oregon for which funding could 15 become available. He was feeling much better and wanted to focus on professional goals. He 16 did not feel the need for services but agreed to seek services if needed in the future.

17 59. On October 24, 2013, he was seen a final time. He described his mood as 18 worsening since the WSBA had found out about something that might involve a disciplinary 19 action. He requested a letter outlining his treatment dates and setting forth a diagnosis.
20 Throughout his treatment in 2013, his judgment and insight appeared intact. His thoughts were 21 logical and linear. There was no evidence that he had, at any time during treatment, disclosed to 22 his treatment provider that he had removed and converted funds from his IOLTA account for his 23 own personal use.

24 CHARACTER EVIDENCE AND CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE LEGAL COMMUNITY

25 60. The Respondent had three witnesses testify on his behalf regarding his character

1 and contributions to the legal community, Witness Nunes, Witness Dunlap, and Witness Keyes.
2 These witnesses verified that the Respondent is an active volunteer in the legal community. He 3 has devoted significant time to pro bono human rights work, moot court activities, and providing 4 legal consultation and emotional support to his peers.

5 61. Witness Nunes met the Respondent while she was attending law school. They 6 dated approximately 1.5 years and in the Fall 2012, which was her last year of law school, they 7 began to cohabitate. They lived together approximately 8-9 months at which time, Witness
8 Nunes relocated. She is presently a practicing attorney in Massachusetts.

9 62. Witness Nunes was aware that the Respondent had removed funds from his trust
10 account to which he was not entitled. However, she was unaware of the details and she did not 11 know when it occurred.

12 63. Witness Dunlap met the Respondent in approximately 2002 while classmates at 13 Seattle University Law school. They remained in contact after graduation in 2005. She is a 14 practicing lawyer and handles class action matters. She spoke highly of the Respondent's 15 contribution to the legal community both in terms of his availability to provide consultation to his 16 peers and his dedication to work in international human rights. She very recently learned that 17 some action by the Respondent had subjected him to a disciplinary proceeding. However, the 18 Respondent did not disclose to her what the alleged conduct was and she specifically did not 19 know that he had removed funds from his IOLTA trust account to which he was not entitled.

20 64. Witness Keyes met the Respondent as a first year law student at Seattle
21 University Law School. They were heavily involved in the management of Moot Court Honor 22 Board during their third year and they maintained a relationship since then. Mr. Keyes presently 23 does regulatory work with state utility commissions across the country. He spoke highly of the 24 Respondent's ongoing volunteer involvement with Seattle University's moot court as well as his 25 work in international human rights. Witness Keyes and Respondent had not discussed

1 Respondent's removal of funds to which he was not entitled. Witness Keyes had read the 2 Respondent's Rebuttal Brief and so, was aware that ODC's allegations related to the removal of 3 funds from trust.

4 65. The Respondent's work in the area of international human rights has been 5 recognized by his peers. His work in this area was the subject of articles in Lawyer
6 Magazine in 2011 and Seattle Weekly and Washington State Bar News in 2012. He has 7 been identified as a Rising Star in Super Lawyers Magazine in the area of International Law.

8 66. The Respondent testified that he at all times had an intent to repay the 9 $7,500.00 he removed from the IOLTA trust account.

10 67. The Respondent testified that his depression started in October of 2012.
11 However, that testimony is not credible.

12 II. CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

13 COUNT 1

14 I.A. Violation of RPC 1.15A(b), RPC 8.4(c), and RPC 8.4(b).

15 It was established by a clear preponderance of evidence that the Respondent violated
16 RPC 1.15A(b) by using, converting or borrowing his client's property for his own use; that he 17 violated RPC 8.4(c) by engaging in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or 18 misrepresentation; and that he violated RPC 8.4(b) by committing the criminal act of theft (by 19 embezzlement) which reflects adversely on his honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness as a lawyer in 20 other respects.

21 Here, the Respondent was having financial troubles. On October 15, 2012, his firm wrote 22 checks to disburse all final proceeds received in the M.B. matter. Of particular significance, on 23 October 15, 2012, Respondent's firm wrote a letter to Puget Park Chiropractic Clinic advising 24 that a check in the amount of $8,073.10 was enclosed for them in full settlement of M.B.'s 25 outstanding balance. Although the check was also prepared, neither the check nor the letter to 1 Puget Park were sent.

2 Without notice to his partner, M.B. or Puget Park Chiropractic Clinic, the Respondent
3 withheld the letter and check and kept the funds totaling $8,073.10 in his pooled IOLTA account.

4 These were the sole funds in the trust account from October 18, 2012 until January 30, 5 2013 during which time the Respondent struggled financially.

6 On January 30, 2013, the Respondent wrote a check from the IOLTA account in the 7 amount of $7,500.00 to his firm. He placed those funds in his operating account and used those 8 funds for his own purposes to keep his firm "afloat."

9 1.B. 1. Presumptive Sanction: A violation of RPC 1.15A(b) violates ABA Standard 4.11.

10 Pursuant to ABA Standard at 4.1, Failure to Preserve Client's Property, disbarment is the 11 presumptive sanction where a lawyer knowingly converts client property and causes injury or 12 potential injury to a client.

13 2. Presumptive Sanction: A violation of RPC 8.4(b) and/ or RPC 8.4(c) violates ABA Standard 5.11.

14 Pursuant to ABA Standard at 5.1, Failure to Maintain Personal Integrity, disbarment is the 15 presumptive sanction where a lawyer a) engages in serious criminal conduct , a necessary 16 element of which includes ... misappropriation or theft; or b) a lawyer engages in any other 17 intentional conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation that seriously 18 adversely reflects on the lawyer's fitness to practice.

19 The Respondent asserts that he did not convert the property because he had no intent to 20 deprive the owner of the funds. However, the Respondent's misappropriation of client trust funds
21 constitutes embezzlement, In re the Disciplinary Proceeding Against Schwimmer, 153 Wn. 2d
22 752, 761, 108 P. 3d 761 (2005). Unlike theft by taking, embezzlement involves a violation of trust 23 and does not require proof of an intent to permanently deprive the owner of the property taken.

Here, M.B.'s health provider, Puget Park Chiropractic, was harmed as they were deprived of the use of their funds for approximately five months, from approximately October 15, 2013 until some time between March 21, 2013 and April 1, 2013 when the check in the amount of $8,073.10 to Puget Park cleared the bank. The Respondent was struggling financially and had he not found the means to provide restitution, the harm to Puget Park would have been much greater. Public awareness of dishonest conduct by lawyers casts the legal profession into disrepute in the eyes of the public and harms the public's trust of the legal profession.

2.A. Violation of RPC 1.15A(h)(2) by violating RPC 1.15B(a)(1).

It was established by a clear preponderance of evidence that the Respondent violated RPC 1.15A(h)(2) by failing to keep complete records as required by RPC 1.15(B)(a)(1). Pursuant to RPC 1.15(B)(a)(1), the Respondent was required to maintain a check book register or equivalent for each trust account , including entries for all receipts, disbursements, and transfers with a new trust account balance after each receipt, disbursal or transfer.

From April 10, 2012 through May 18, 2012, the Respondent had $620.76 in his IOLTA account with Key Bank but he did not know to whom it belonged. Upon researching the situation, he realized that there were a series of overpayments and irregularities in the trust account. In particular, one check in the amount of $1,000.00 written to CDI six months earlier on November 2, 2011 had not cleared.

Query where that check had been for the prior six months and why CDI had not tendered the check to the bank for payment. However, had the payee attempted to negotiate the check, on March 22, 2012 or between April 3, 2012 and April 10, 2012, there would have been insufficient funds in the trust account. The Respondent's lack of knowledge or unawareness of the deficiency establishes the Respondent's non-compliance by a clear preponderance of the 1 evidence.

2 2.B. Presumptive Sanction: Violation of RPC 1.15B(a)(1) violates ABA Standard 4.1.

3 Pursuant to ABA Standard at 4.1, Failure to Preserve Client's Property, suspension is the 4 presumptive sanction when a lawyer knows or should know that he is dealing improperly with 5 client property and causes injury or potential injury to a client.

6 The Respondent asserts that he may not have been the person in charge of the trust
7 account during his partnership with Matthew Hale. However, according to his own testimony, 8 the partnership with Matthew Hale dissolved on January 1, 2012 and he took over and was the 9 sole manager of the Key Bank trust account after January 1, 2012. By April 10, 2012 when the 10 balance was only $620.76, he should have known that he was dealing improperly with client 11 property.

12 2.C. Potential or Actual Injury due to Violation of RPC 1.15B(a)(1).

13
14 Here, there was potential harm to CDI in the amount of $1,000.00. Had they attempted to 15 negotiate the check, there would have been insufficient funds and they would have been 16 deprived of the use of the funds owed to them. If the Respondent had not been able to deposit
17 the funds necessary to cover, the hardship to CDI would have been of longer duration.

18 COUNT 3

19 3.A. Violation of RPC 1.15A(h)(2) and RPC 1.15B(a)(2).

20 It was established by a clear preponderance of evidence that the Respondent violated
21 RPC 1.15A(h)(2) by violating RPC 1.15B(a)(2) by failing to maintain individual client ledger
22 records on a current basis containing either a separate page for each client or an equivalent 23 client record showing all individual receipts, disbursements, or transfers containing specific 24 information the date on which trust funds were received, disbursed or transferred.

25 The Respondent was unapologetic and emphatic in his testimony in regards to his past

1 and current position that contingency fee cases, such as personal injury matters, are exempt
2 from the requirements of RPC 1.15B(a)(2) and that therefore, he did not maintain individual 3 client ledgers in all cases.

4 However, not all client ledgers maintained were in compliance. On April 24, 2013, at the 5 request of ODC, the Respondent provided ODC a copy of trust documents for M.B. He provided
6 an individual client ledger record for M.B. dated October 15, 2012 which he identified as a "Client
7 Ledger." It itemized the checks paid, including the check number, the date of check, the amount
8 of check, and the payee with purpose of payment. However, it did not indicate on what dates
9 deposits were received into the trust account nor the amounts of each deposit. It also did not 10 contain the new client fund balance after each receipt, disbursement or transfer.

11
12 3.B. Presumptive Sanction: Violation of RPC 1.15B(a)(2) violates ABA Standard 4.1.

13 Pursuant to ABA Standard at 4.1, Failure to Preserve Client's Property, suspension is the 14 presumptive sanction when a lawyer knows or should know that he is dealing improperly with 15 client property and causes injury or potential injury to a client.

16 Here, the Respondent had responded to trust account inquiries by WSBA in April of 2011
17 in response to an overdraft notice received from Key Bank. Although WSBA exercised their 18 discretion and dismissed the matter, on April 26, 2011, they sent a detailed letter describing the 19 trust account violations. They provided him with the WSBA publication entitled "Managing Client 20 Trust Accounts: Rules, Regulations, and Common Sense" and they recommended he 21 reconstruct his trust account records to bring them in compliance and that he take other actions
22 to comply with RPC 1.15.

23 On May 24, 2012, in response to another inquiry into his trust practices, he wrote a letter
24 to WSBA setting out the irregularities he found, outlined steps he would take to correct the errors 25 and balance the trust account, and indicated he would consult with his accountant "in order to

1 strictly adhere to the WSBA's trust requirements."

2 In light of the above, the Respondent clearly knows RPC 1.15B(a)(2) obligates him to 3 maintain individual client ledgers in all matters, even contingency fee cases.

4 3.C. Potential or Actual Injury due to Violation of RPC 1.15B(a)(2).

6 Here, the potential harm as a result of a failure to maintain individual client ledgers is that 7 the Respondent will not know if he has overpaid or underpaid a client or obligations on behalf of 8 a client. If he overpays in one matter, and he does not have the funds to correct that mistake, 9 then a client or their provider may be deprived of funds to which they are entitled. In the 10 alternative, he would use another client's money to make the overpayment, thus depriving a 11 client of use of his or her money while he used it for payment of others.

12

13 COUNT 4

14 4 A. Violation of RPC 1.15A(h)(6).

15 It was established by a clear preponderance of evidence that the Respondent violated
16 RPC 1.15A(h)(6) by failing to reconcile his trust account records as often as bank statements are 17 generated or at least quarterly and by failing to reconcile his check register balance to the bank 18 statement balance and by failing to reconcile the check register balance to the combined total of 19 all client ledger records required by RPC 1.15B(a)(2).

20 The Respondent had sole possession and control of all trust accounts after January 1, 21 2012. On May 17, 2012, he acknowledged that he did not maintain client ledger reconciliations
22 and on May 18, 2012, he acknowledged that he didn't know who the funds of $620.46 belonged
23 to. This was proof by a clear preponderance of the evidence that if he maintained client ledgers, 24 they did not contain the required information and that he did not do the required reconciliations 25 as, had he done so, he would have known the ownership of the funds. At the hearing, he

1 maintained that he did not always maintain client ledgers on personal injury matters as he did
2 not believe it was required on contingency cases such as personal injury matters.

3 4.B. Presumptive Sanction: Violation of RPC 1.15A(h)(6) violates ABA Standard 4.1.

4 Pursuant to ABA Standard at 4.1, Failure to Preserve Client's Property, suspension is the 5 presumptive sanction when a lawyer knows or should know that he is dealing improperly with 6 client property and causes injury or potential injury to a client.

7 Although the respondent was emphatic that RPC 1.15A(h)(6) did not apply to contingency
8 fee cases like personal injury matters, his position was not supported by any reason or objective 9 fact or evidence. In 2011 and 2012, he had received and read the WSBA publication providing 10 guidance on the proper maintenance of trust accounts, and on May 24, 2012, he had assured
11 WSBA that he would consult with his accountant "in order to strictly adhere to the WSBA's trust 12 requirements."

13
14 4.C. Potential or Actual Injury due to Violation of RPC 1.15A(h)(6).

15 The harm as a result of a failure to reconcile trust account records as often as bank 16 statements are generated or at least quarterly is that the Respondent did not know whose 17 money he held in trust, he overpaid some clients and contributed to his own financial distress, 18 and he was unable to ensure that checks written to his client's providers timely received the 19 funds to which they were entitled.

20
21 COUNT 5

22 5 A. Violation of RPC 1.15A(h)(8).

23 It was established by a clear preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent violated
24 RPC 1.15A(h)(8) by, at times, disbursing more to clients than they had on deposit, and thereby, 25 using one client's funds on behalf of another.

5.B. Presumptive Sanction: Violation of RPC 1.15A(a)(8) violates ABA Standard 4.1.

Pursuant to ABA Standard at 4.1, Failure to Preserve Client's Property, suspension is the presumptive sanction when a lawyer knows or should know that he is dealing improperly with client property and causes injury or potential injury to a client.

5.C. Potential or Actual Injury due to Violation of RPC 1.15A(h)(8).

The harm as a result of the Respondent's disbursal to some clients of more funds than they had on deposit is that he deprived other clients of the use of their funds. He also contributed to his own financial distress as that made it more difficult for him to meet client obligations that should have been handled from a client's available trust funds.

II. Aggravating and Mitigating Factors

Mitigating circumstances are any considerations or factors that may justify a reduction in the degree of discipline to be imposed pursuant to ABA Standards 9.32.

Mitigating Factors

The following mitigating factors do or do not apply in this matter.

- (a) Absence of a prior disciplinary offenses:
This is a mitigating factor. The Respondent has no prior disciplinary offenses.
- (b) Absence of a dishonest or selfish motive:
Does not apply. Respondent had a dishonest and selfish motive.
- (c) Personal or emotional problems:
Does not apply. The Respondent offered testimony by himself and at least one lay witness that he was having emotional problems, in particular, he testified feeling depressed. He also provided notes from his counseling sessions with Dr. Greenberg

1 who did not provide testimony. The counseling notes indicated that he had secured brief
2 treatment in 2011, was prescribed a medication but stopped using it as he did not 3 believe it helped. He began counseling again on April 23, 2013 with Dr. Greenberg and 4 he was prescribed an antidepressant by his referring doctor a couple weeks earlier.
5 However, he terminated its use after less than a month as he did not believe it was 6 helping and it had other side effects he did not care for. Generally, he described apathy
7 malaise, lack of motivation, and feeling overwhelmed by his professional responsibilities
8 and financial struggles. He was irritable, slept too much and had difficulty getting up in 9 the morning. He described drinking too much intermittently. His sessions focused on his 10 disenchantment with personal injury work and disappointment that he was unable to be 11 paid doing meaningful work in the area of human rights, and the financial problems he 12 suffered as a result. He also focused on his past and current relationships with women, 13 his role as a caretaker in relationships, and his sense of lethargy and feeling depleted
14 from giving so much and not getting anything in return. Until a return session in October 15 of 2013, there was no evidence or indication that he had disclosed his conversion of 16 client funds to Dr. Greenberg.

17 Washington courts make it clear in a long line of cases that there must be a causal 18 connection between the asserted problem and the misconduct, In Re Disciplinary 19 Proceeding Against Hicks, 166 Wn. 2d 774, 788, 214 P. 3d 897 (2009), citing In Re
20 Disciplinary Proceeding Against Holcomb, 162 Wn. 2d 563, 591, 173 P. 3d 898(2007), 21 citing In Re Disciplinary Proceeding Against Christopher, 153 Wn. 2d 669, 684, 105 P.
22 3d 976 (2005); In Re Disciplinary Proceeding Against Curran, 115 Wn. 2d 747, 774, 801
23 P. 2d 962 (1990) citing In Re Disciplinary Proceeding Against Johnson, 114 Wn. 2d 737, 24 748, 790 P. 2d 1227 (1990).

25 In In Re Disciplinary Proceeding Against McLendon, 120 Wn. 2d 761, 845 P. 2d 1006
(1993), the Respondent borrowed just over $1 million from his clients without proper documentation and misappropriated other client funds and he spent it on extravagant personal endeavors ending in April of 1987. Not all funds borrowed were paid back.
McLendon had suffered mood swings and depression for a period of years going from wired, grandiose, and angry to withdraw, totally down, and suicidal. In April of 1987, McLendon's behaviors had worsened to such a degree that he was involuntarily admitted to a psychiatric hospital for 43 days. He was diagnosed as suffering from bipolar disorder, which results in phases of mania and depression with impaired judgment. In that case, the testimony of the psychiatric experts was that during a manic stage, the ability to form an intent to the ability to know that they acted and be aware of consequences was severely impaired.

In our case, the Respondent's counseling notes all indicated that his judgment and insight appeared intact and that his thoughts were logical and linear. Although he may have experienced some depression, there is no evidence of a causal connection between emotional state and his depression. Likewise, there is no evidence that the Respondent acted out of an uncontrolled impulse or that he did not understand what he was doing. Unlike McLendon who openly borrowed or took funds and publicly made extravagant expenditures, the Respondent appeared purposeful in his planning and he concealed his use of funds. A record was created indicating that funds were being paid to a client's provider. Instead of permitting the funds to be paid, he secretly withheld the funds. When his financial woes did not ameliorate, he converted enough funds to be helpful without overdrawing the trust account. When the conduct was uncovered, he

1 again acted rationally and in his best interest by consulting with an expert in the area of 2 professional responsibility to ascertain his best course of action.

3 The Respondent attempts to distinguish his case from In Re Disciplinary Proceeding
4 Against Christopher, 153 Wn 2d 669, 683, 105 P.3d 976 (2005). There the court stated
5 that "some depression was not a significant mitigating factor where an attorney stole 6 client funds." Respondent argues he experienced Major Depressive Disorder and that 7 he responded well to psychotherapy. However, there is no evidence that the 8 Respondent treated his emotional problem with seriousness. He attended 9 approximately 8 sessions in 2013, declined to take the medication given to him, and 10 announced himself cured after a few short sessions. His treatment plan was general in 11 nature and other than a promise to contact his counselor in the future should he feel the 12 need, there was no planned follow up.

13 The Respondent's emotional problems are not a mitigating factor in this case.

14 (d) Timely good faith effort to make restitution or to rectify the consequences of misconduct.

15 Does not apply but is also not an aggravating factor.

16 Pursuant to ABA Standard 9.4(a), forced or compelled restitution is neither aggravating 17 nor mitigating. Here, the Respondent converted funds and restitution was compelled.

18 The Respondent bears the burden of proof on mitigating factors pursuant to In Re 19 Disciplinary Proceeding of Cramer, 168 Wn. 2d 220, 238, 225 P. 3d 881 (2010). There is 20 no evidence that he attempted to secure loans of any size, either from friends or 21 commercial institutions, in order to make payments of any size prior to March 21, 2013.
22 Likewise, there is also no evidence that he attempted to take on business in areas of law 23 he found undesirable in order to earn income in order to provide immediate restitution.
24 Here, the Respondent provided restitution as soon as he believed he was able after he 25 knew that discovery of the conversion was imminent. Although there is no evidence he attempted to evade restitution, as he had no choice but to provide restitution, restitution was compelled and there is insufficient evidence to overcome the language of ABA Standard 9.4 (a).

(e) Full and free disclosure to disciplinary board or cooperative attitude toward proceedings:

Does not apply. The burden is on the attorney to establish that his disclosure or cooperation surpassed what is required from all attorneys, In Re Disciplinary Proceeding Against Conteh, 175 Wn. 2d 134, 151 – 52, 284 P. 3d 274 (2012). Here, in regards to COUNT 1, the Respondent disclosed his conversion of trust account funds after the WSBA auditor had requested his records and he knew that proof of his conversion was imminent. This diminishes the weight that might be given to this mitigating factor, and this factor does not apply.

In regards to his failure to properly maintain client trust account records, the Respondent has vacillated between insisting that the "client ledgers" he provides are compliant, acknowledging that he doesn't maintain client ledgers or do reconciliations, and insisting that RPC 1.15A and RPC 1.15B do not apply to personal injury matters. Although the Respondent bears the burden of proof, he provided no expert testimony or legal citations to support his position that his interpretation is reasonable and/ or in good faith. Apart from his pro bono work in human rights, there was no evidence that he handled matters outside of contingent fee personal injury matters. As there was testimony that Respondent handled at least two fundraisers for his human rights work, query how proceeds from fundraisers were tracked or managed. The Respondent did not meet his burden of proof on this mitigating factor.

(f) Inexperience in the practice of law:

Does not apply but is also not an aggravating factor.

The respondent graduated from law school in 2006 and has been involved in private practice in Washington for most of the time since then. Although he provides consultation and assistance to his colleagues and new lawyers, at the time that these infractions occurred he had been practicing approximately 6-7 years. He has a moderate amount of experience in the practice of law.

(f) Character or reputation:

The respondent presented considerable evidence regarding pro bono work performed in the area of international human rights, with his alma mater's moot court honor board, and in general support to his colleagues. His colleagues spoke highly of his passion for human rights, the importance of his work, in addition to his positive support of others in the legal field. Additionally, he has been identified as a Rising Star in the area of human rights by Super Lawyers magazine.

The Respondent is to be commended for his pro bono work. However, one of his peers who testified on his behalf had no knowledge of Respondent's conversion of client trust account funds for his own use. Another knew the funds had been converted but did not know any details, including when it had occurred. Another had only the information contained in Respondent's rebuttal brief. His brief did not acknowledge any deficiencies in his recordkeeping but rather, cast blame on a prior partner.

Respondent failed to inform his own witnesses of either the facts of his conversion of trust funds or the deficiencies in his record keeping of trust accounts so they were limited in their ability to offer an opinion regarding certain aspects of the Respondent's character. This is, however, a mitigating factor as to COUNT 1.

The Respondent appears somewhat indifferent to his record keeping obligations. Were the only violations found to be on COUNTS 2-5, the positive evidence regarding the Respondent's contributions to the legal community and his reputation in the legal community would still be deemed a mitigating factor.

(h) Physical disability:

Does not apply.

- 1 (i) Mental disability or chemical dependency including alcoholism or drug abuse when:
- 2 1) there is medical evidence that the respondent is affected by chemical
- 3 dependency or mental disability;
- 4 2) the chemical dependency or mental disability cause the misconduct;
- 5 3) the respondent's recovery from the chemical dependency or mental disability is
- 6 demonstrated by a meaningful and sustained period of successful rehabilitation,
- 7 and
- 8 4) the recovery arrested the misconduct and recurrence of that misconduct is
- 9 unlikely.

10 Although there was evidence that the Respondent experiences symptoms associated 11 with depression,

- 12 1) there was no medical evidence that the Respondent has a mental disability.
- 13 2) As there was no evidence that Respondent's treatment provider was aware of
- 14 the Respondent's conversion of client trust funds, there was no evidence that any
- 15 emotional difficulties experienced caused the misconduct. Rather, the testimony
- 16 and evidence was that it was his financial difficulties that precipitated the
- 17 conversion of client funds. Presumably, had he not been under financial stress,
- 18 he would not have converted the funds. There is no evidence at all that his
- 19 emotional difficulties and/ or financial difficulties were related to his refusal to
- 20 maintain proper trust account records.
- 21 3) There is no evidence of a meaningful and sustained period of successful
- 22 rehabilitation. Although the evidence is that the Respondent last went to
- 23 counseling in October of 2013, the Respondent testified that his emotional
- 24 struggles are ongoing.
- 25 4) As the Respondent's emotional struggles are ongoing, as he is not in treatment,
- if they caused the misconduct, the likelihood is that the misconduct will recur.

26 This mitigating factor does not apply.

27 (j) Delay in disciplinary proceeding:

28 Does not apply.

29 (k) Imposition of other penalties or sanctions:

30 Does not apply.

31 (l) Remorse:

32 In regards to the conversion of client trust funds, the respondent provided restitution.

33 However, there is not a preponderance of evidence that he feels remorse. The 34 Respondent provided no apology to his former partner, Alex Ferguson, his client whose 35 funds were used, or Puget Park Chiropractic who waited 6 months to receive the payment they should have received in October of 2012.

1 In regards to Respondent's violations of his trust account record keeping obligations, not 2 only is there no remorse, the Respondent refuses to acknowledge any wrongdoing and 3 doggedly insists that his practice of law is exempt from the rules of professional 4 responsibility. The Respondent's position does not appear based in good faith but rather 5 appears to be an effort to avoid findings that he violated his trust account record keeping 6 obligations.

7 (m) Remoteness of prior offenses.

8 Does not apply. Respondent has no prior disciplinary offenses.

9 Aggravating Factors

10 The following aggravating factors set forth at ABA Standards 9.22 do or do not apply in 11 this matter in support of the ultimate sanction of disbarment or suspension.

12 (a) Prior disciplinary record:

13 Does not apply.

14 (b) Dishonest or selfish motive.

15 This is an aggravating factor in regards to the conversion of client trust funds (Count 16 1). The Respondent was motivated by dishonest or selfish motives. He was having 17 financial problems but he did not want to practice in areas of law which he found 18 mundane. His career was benefitting from the positive press he received for human 19 rights work and he hoped that his pro bono work would lead to paid work. He 20 converted his clients' funds to move him closer to his career goals rather than to 21 cease doing work that he could not afford to do.

22 There was no dishonest or selfish motive in regards to his failure to properly
23 maintain client trust account records, and so, it does not apply as to Counts 2-5.

24 (c) A pattern of misconduct:

25 There is no pattern of misconduct in regards to count 1 and so does not apply.

This is an aggravating factor in regards to counts 2 through 5. The respondent knowingly violated his trust account record keeping obligations despite multiple communications with the Washington state Bar Association advising him of his responsibilities.

(d) Multiple offenses:

This is an aggravating factor. The respondent has multiple offenses as all five COUNTS were proven by a clear preponderance of the evidence. COUNT 1 was clear and distinct from COUNTS 2-5 and required dishonesty. Although COUNTS 2-

1 5 all related to his trust account, COUNT 2 dealt with check book registry. COUNT 3 2 dealt with the maintenance of individual client ledgers for each client for whom he 3 held trust funds, COUNT 4 required the balancing of his check register to his bank 4 statement and his the reconciliation of a the combined total of all client ledgers with 5 his trust account check register balance. Finally, COUNT 5 five prohibited him from 6 disbursing more to clients than they had on deposit. With the exception of COUNT 5, a violation that would increase in probability if there was no reconciliation between individual client ledgers, trust register total and bank statements, all required actions that were a different aspect of record keeping. Violation of one would not necessarily result in violation of another. So, the Respondent committed multiple offenses.

7 (e) Bad faith obstruction of the disciplinary proceeding by intentionally failing to comply 8 with rules or orders of the disciplinary agency:

9 Does not apply.

10 (f) Submission of false evidence, false statements, or other deceptive practices during 11 the disciplinary process:

12 Does not apply.

13 (g) Refusal to acknowledge the wrongful nature of conduct:

14 In regards to Count 1, this is neither an aggravating nor mitigating factor. The Respondent acknowledged his wrongdoing. In light of the egregious nature of his conduct, a simple acknowledgment bears little weight.

15 (h) Vulnerability of victim:

16 Does not apply.

17 (i) Substantial experience in the practice of law:

18 Does not apply. The Respondent has moderate experience in the practice of law.

19 (j) Indifference to making restitution.

20 Does not apply.

21 (k) Illegal conduct, including that involving the use of controlled substances.

22 Does not apply. The Respondent has been found in violation of RPC 8.4 (b). A finding that this is an aggravating factor would be unwarranted and punitive.

23 IV. RECOMMENDATION

24
25 Where the Hearing Officer finds multiple ethical violations, the "ultimate sanction

1 imposed should at least be consistent with the sanction for the most serious instance of 2 misconduct among a number of violations." In re Disciplinary Proceeding Against Petersen, 120
3 Wn.2d 833, 854, 846 P.2d 1330 (1993) (quoting ABA Standards at 6).

4 Here, the Association proved COUNTS 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 by a clear preponderance of the 5 evidence. The most serious misconduct by the Respondent is COUNT 1, his violation of RPC
6 1.15A(b), RPC 8.4 (b), and RPC 8.4(c). The presumptive sanction for that violation is 7 disbarment. Where a lawyer has failed to preserve the integrity of client funds, that leads to 8 disbarment absent extraordinary mitigating circumstances, In re Disciplinary Proceeding Against 9 Petersen, 120 Wash.2d 833, 854, 846 P.2d 1330 (1993). The question becomes whether there 10 is any mitigating circumstance sufficient to warrant departure from the presumptive sanction of 11 disbarment. In this case, in regards to COUNT 1, there were two mitigating circumstances, the 12 absence of a prior record, and the Respondent's reputation in the legal community.

13 Here there are no extraordinary circumstances. Like forgery, the conversion of client trust
14 funds is an inherently dishonest act. It is a breach of a client's trust and evidence of good 15 reputation is not enough to outweigh the dishonest nature of the misconduct, In Re Disciplinary 16 Proceeding Against Rodriguez, 117 Wn. 2d 872, 889, 306 P. 3d 898 (2013).

17 The Respondent has argued that it is callous not to acknowledge the good work the 18 Respondent has done in the area of human rights. However, it is not for the Respondent to 19 determine that his legal work is more worthy than the work of other lawyers. He has a fiduciary 20 relationship with his clients, and upon accepting a client's funds into trust, he has a fiduciary 21 obligation to safeguard those funds and not to convert those funds for his own use. His 22 reputation and contributions to the legal community are not extraordinary such that a deviation 23 from the presumptive sanction of disbarment is warranted.

24 Based on the ABA standards, even without the aggravating factors, the Hearing Officer
25 recommends that Respondent, James D. Pirtle, be disbarred for his violation of COUNT 1.

SANCTION FOR LESSER COUNTS

If the Respondent had not committed the violations as set forth in COUNT 1, then he would be sanctioned for his violations of COUNTS 2, 3, 4, and 5. Each COUNT would carry its own separate sanction of suspension.

The hearing officer would recommend a one month suspension for each independent count.

The mitigating circumstances regarding Respondent's reputation and contributions to the legal community would be given more weight and his lack of prior disciplinary offenses would be given weight. However, the aggravating factors would be given considerable weight.

Respondent's pattern of misconduct in regards to his record keeping and lack of remorse, including his refusal to acknowledge the wrongful nature of his conduct are a concern. Despite WSBA's efforts, the Respondent has refused to bring his record keeping practices into compliance and appears somewhat cavalier in his disregard for his record keeping obligations.

Given the ongoing nature of his record keeping violations, the hearing officer would recommend that his four- one month suspensions run consecutively for a four month suspension rather than concurrently. Again, the ultimate recommendation is for disbarment due to the violation of COUNT 1.
